YOUNGEST "BIG LEAGUE" FOOTBALL COACH

Charles ("Shy") Huntington.

Charles ("Shy") Huntington, head coach of the University of Oregon football team, which recently met defeat at the hands of Harvard at Pasadena, Cal., is said to be the youngest "big league" coach. He is 27 years old and played on the Oregon team which defeated the University of Pennsylvania team at Pasadena in 1916.

LUCRATIVE YEAR FOR LIGHTWEIGHT BOXER

Shekels Poured Into Coffers of Champion During 1919.

New York Boy Drew Down $200,000
as His Share of Battles in Which He Participated—Piled His Trade With Diligence.

The year just passed was certainly a lucrative one for Benny Leonard, the lightweight champion. The New York boy drew down a cool $200,000 as his share of the battles in which he participated during 1919.

Leonard was the most active of all the boxers, large or small, in this fertile land. He piled his trade with a diligence and vigor never before displayed by a champion in any class. He realized that the reign of a champion is not long at most and that a title holder has to "get it while the getting is good."

Leonard engaged in 25 bouts during the year, an average of a bout almost every two weeks. This is exclusive of the several benefit bouts he boxed. According to his manager, Billy Gibson, the total gate receipts for these bouts amounted to approximately $500,000.

If Leonard drew down $200,000 as his share then he averaged about 40 per cent of the gate in each bout in which he took part. To attract a total of a half million dollars, the gate receipts for each bout averaged $20,000, and Leonard received an average of $8,000 for every time he entered the ring to do battle.

In eight of Leonard's principal bouts the gates totaled $200,000, an average of $25,000 per bout. The remaining 16 bouts drew $298,500, an average of $17,550. His biggest drawing card was his bout with Willie Ritchie at Newark, which drew a $50,000 house. His battle with Patsy Cline came second with $37,000, and his next best was his go with Johnny Dundee at Newark, which netted $26,000.

The fact that Leonard was able to average one bout almost every two weeks is all the more remarkable when it is remembered that the champion did little boxing during the summer months. All through July and most of August he was idle. Then he returned to the whirlwind campaign that had featured his schedule during the spring and early summer months. As fast as matches could be made for him he boxed. He was ever ready to enter the ring against any opponent the promoters might select for him. He recently concluded his year's work in the ring with a short but productive tour through the South.

new coach is a smart baseball man and should prove to be a valuable assistant to Mitchell.

Donovan was at one time a member of the Brooklyn team and later went to the Pirates. At the end of his playing days he was selected to manage the Brooklyn team. Later he became the manager of the Boston Red Sox. During the past few years he has been connected with several international league clubs. He has managed the Buffalo, Newark and Syracuse clubs of that league.

CARPENTIER'S VICTORY
NO FLUKE, SAYS KLAUS

Frank Klaus, former middleweight champion of the world, who holds a victory over Georges Carpentier, the European champion, commenting on the Frenchman's chances in a bout with Champion Jack Dempsey, said: "Carpentier's victory was not a fluke. Make no mistake about that; he is a great fighter. While I don't think he can beat Dempsey I do think Carpentier can give Jack the toughest argument he ever had in all his life."

ANSON MADE VICTIM OF ODD TRICK PLAY

Gore Got Even With Old Boss for Transferring Him.

Performance, Engineered by Centerfielder and Buck Ewing, Stood Out
as One of Smartest Pieces of Strategy at Time.

There have been many freak and tricky plays in baseball, but there was one engineered years ago by the late Buck Ewing and George Gore, two popular Giants of the early eighties, in which Pop Anson, the famous old leader of the Chicago White Stockings, fell a victim. The play took place on the old Polo grounds, then located at One Hundred and Tenth street and Fifth avenue. The performance stood out as one of the smartest pieces of baseball strategy at that time. Gore had been let out by Anson, and, while he did not object to playing with the Giants, he looked upon his transfer as a reflection on his playing and so was determined to get even with his old boss. He never overlooked a chance when one presented itself.

In the game in which this freaky play was made the score was even at two all. Anson led off in the sixth inning with a two-base hit along the third-base line and then proceeded to take a long lead off second. Pfeffer was the next batter, and as he was a natural left-field hitter, the outfield was drawn way over in that direction, the right fielder being almost at the center field position, while Gore in center was drawn well in almost back of the infield, the left fielder, of course, playing his field very deep.

That was the situation as Anse hopped about between second and third, anxious to get off with the crack of the bat. And right here is where the cunning Gore and the brilliant Ewing worked the cruel trick on the Chicago boss. The coaches were following instructions to Anson.

"Pop" Anson.

but for some reason or other never noticed that Gore was creeping closer and closer to the infield with every move of the pitcher.

Then, all of a sudden, with the signals working in absolute harmony, Gore was seen to race directly to the second base, and Ewing, having started his throw the moment Gore raced toward the base, the big Chicago captain was trapped. Ewing's throw was a perfect one, and as the astonished Anse plunged toward the base, there was Gore waiting for him, with the ball.

The whole thing happened so fast that many of the spectators missed the play, but when it dawned upon them that Anson had been thrown out at second base and that the center fielder had taken the throw, they gave Anse a great jolly. Of course, Gore was the happiest man in the ball park, for he squared accounts with his old leader.
